PREFACE

A third edition of this useful Manual being called for, we are glad to be able to offer it with entirely revised and improved contents, though the original plan is unchanged. Owing to the experimental nature of the first and second issues no electrotype was made. The wide use and the calls that have come for the Manual from many parts of the country have persuaded us to re-edit and keep it in print.

Miss Mary L. Ely, who has succeeded Miss Hoskins as Head of the Children's Department, has revised and added to the List of Children's Books until now it includes nearly 800 titles. The selection of new titles or editions is based largely upon her experience with the annual Children's exhibit of choice children's books, at which time a thorough study is made of the publications of the year. A few books have been added to supplement changes in the course of study in the Dayton schools. Some out of print or superseded books have been omitted. The index will make the list more usable for some purposes.

The Board of Education, through the Superintendent of Schools, Mr. E. J. Brown, has been pleased to order copies for all the teachers of the local public schools, and we are again under obligation to Miss Anna H. Littell, Supervisor of Kindergartens, for her excellent story list.

It is hoped that this Manual will be useful in the cause of coöperation between library, school, and home in Dayton. Parents will be able to see the range of children's books and guide their children in their reading both at home and through the school. Teachers will hang the Manual in the school room to be consulted by themselves and pupils in selecting books for school or home reading. As the Superintendent suggests, they will find it will broaden out the interests awakened by the Pupils' Reading Course and help the children to become independent and enthusiastic readers. It will also serve as an aid in the choosing of class-room libraries from the collection sent to the schools each year by the Public Library.

The teachers are requested to read carefully the instructions at the end of the Manual on how to use the Public Library. In the near future, when two branch children's rooms are added to the library facilities of Dayton, some simple instruction to the pupils in our grade schools on efficient book and library use will be desirable. The Superintendent and Librarian will hope to devise a plan in the near future and will ask for the teachers' interested coöperation. Meanwhile we hope each teacher will make it a point to learn to use the Library independently for her own purposes. We want the Library to be a store house of inspiration and pleasure, as well as information, to all those who are called on to inspire others. The key to much of this store house is this Manual. It is offered in the spirit of simple helpfulness.

Linda M. Clatworthy,
Librarian Dayton Public Library and Museum.

BOOKS FOR CHILDREN

The following list of books represents the best of the school library collection, which is itself a selected library of children's literature. The aim has been to touch upon all the interests of normal children and to offer in each field books which are accurate in their information, good in their literary style, and uplifting in their moral influence.

Very few supplementary readers and text-books have been listed, since material of that sort is supplied to the schools by the Board of Education. Interesting collateral reading in connection with the school courses has been included, however, wherever it was available.

For the lower grades, primers and first readers have been suggested, for the reason that they furnish the most attractive and, in fact, almost the only reading adapted to the youngest children.

The picture books represent the work of some of our foremost illustrators of children's books, and picture a wide variety of objects, scenes, and activities. Wholesome nonsense pictures and illustrations of favorite folk-lore tales are also included.

Although this list is based upon the school library collection, practically all of the books mentioned may be obtained in the children's rooms at the main library and branches. "j" before the call number (printed after title at right side of page) indicates that the books may be so obtained. "S" before call number means that books may be secured only through the School Department.

Mary L. Ely,
Head of Children's Department, Dayton Public Library.

LIST OF STORIES TO TELL TO CHILDREN

Two brief rules for successful story telling are these: "Know the story," "Know the child." The following list of stories, taken from several fields of literature, are selected as typical of those that meet some of the deepest needs of childhood. No claim is made for completeness in this selection, but the list aims to be suggestive of the realm of the story world into which to lead the child. To "know the child" is to know his needs. To "know the story" is to know the sources from which it came, to know its setting, to feel the atmosphere in which it grew.

The story teller who has thus entered into the heart of the story, loves the story, and has felt its truth, is then fitted to tell it to the children.

The Dayton Library contains many of the best editions of the great stories which have many a message for the children of to-day, and each one who would be a good story teller, is urged to dip deep into the volumes which contain the sources of these stories, and having entered into the story, and let the story "enter in," she is ready to adapt it to the needs of the listeners.

Anna H. Littell.

HELPS FOR LIBRARY USE

Location and Hours

The Central building, containing the Library and Museum, is located in Cooper Park on East Third and St. Clair streets. The Library is open every day from 8:30 A.M. until 9:00 P.M., with the exception of Sundays and legal holidays. The Children's Room closes at 5:30 P.M. The Museum is open from one until five P.M. every day, except Sunday, Monday, and legal holidays.

Three small branch libraries are located in public school buildings, as follows:

Location	Hours Open
Franklin School, East Fifth and Findlay streets Garfield School, West Fifth and Barnett streets Ruskin School, Henry Street	Monday, Tuesday and Thursday—3:30-7.30 P.M. Saturday—2.00-8:00 P.M.

After December, 1912, two new Carnegie branch library buildings will be opened for the east and west sections of the city, in place of the first two branches mentioned above. The new East branch will be in Findlay Park, corner East Fifth and Columbus streets. The West branch will be in its own park, corner of West Fifth Street and Euclid Avenue. These branches will be open the same days as the Main Library, during the afternoons and evenings.

Resources

The Library system contains about 100,000 volumes, 250 current periodicals, and a growing collection of about 8,000 mounted pictures. All but about 15,000 of the books and many of the periodicals and pictures can be borrowed for home and school use. New publications are being added at the rate of over 5,000 volumes per year.

The Museum contains many thousand specimens from all parts of the world, including mounted birds, fish, reptiles, mammals, and insects; shells, sea plants, coins, birds' eggs and nests, botanical specimens, Indian and war relics; industrial art of various countries, as China, Japan, the Philippines, Turkey, India, etc.; Indian pottery and basket work, anatomical models, geological specimens, etc. Teachers are especially invited to bring their classes to visit the Museum.

Privileges

The Museum is open without charge to all visitors.

The privilege of borrowing books from the Library is free to any resident of Dayton. In addition, any tax payer, whether he lives within the city or not, and any one attending school in Dayton, may have a library card.

Certificates may be secured at the Library and need only be signed by some responsible citizen as guarantor to secure a library card.

Books are loaned for two weeks with privilege of renewal. Current periodicals are issued for four days.

Two books may be kept out at a time, providing not more than one is fiction.

Teachers' Special Cards

Teachers in Dayton schools, public, parochial, and private, are entitled to the privilege of drawing out 10 books at a time for 28 days from the Central Library. These books are for the teacher's personal use in school work, and may not include more than three children's books. She is held strictly responsible for their condition and seasonable return. When any teacher desires that books so drawn shall be used by the pupils at home, such books should be first returned to the Library and regularly issued on the pupil's card.

This is a very liberal provision made for our teachers and very many avail themselves of it. The teacher who continues to pursue her own reading and study surely grows.

Normal School and County Teachers' Cards

City Normal School students and Dayton teachers in the county schools outside the city, literary club members, and other special students are entitled to a special card, which allows 6 books at a time for 7 days. These are not subject to renewal, but may be transferred to the regular card.

Children's Department

This is the place to which we invite most cordially all the children of the city. Indeed, we think it the duty of every teacher and parent to introduce their children to it while they are forming their reading habit and taste. It will influence all their lives. In the last two years over 4,500 children signed cards and used them in the Children's department, either at the Central or branch libraries. Next year there will be two more children's rooms added to the department in the two new branch buildings, and these will be truly attractive. Teachers are urged to bring their classes or individual children to the libraries.

Story hours and illustrated talks are held by the department from time to time, and boys' and girls' literary or debating clubs may be formed, like the Mark Twain Literary Club at the East branch and the Shakespeare Club at Henry Street branch.

A Mothers' collection of fresh, clean, illustrated children's books, suitable for reading aloud at home, will be found suggestive. The books may be borrowed only by adults.

The Children's Reference Room at the Main library is equipped with books to help in the school and individual study work. Miss Ely, the Head of the department, is there afternoons and Saturdays to help the children look up questions. Teachers and principals are asked to let her or the branch librarians know in advance when classes are to be sent, so that they may arrange to have sufficient material for all.

Notices of new books and other matters of interest to teachers will be found on a bulletin board in this room.

The growing collection of mounted pictures kept nearby will be found helpful in illustrating history, geography, nature, and art lessons, or for illustrated talks. Teachers and parents are invited to use them.

A Christmas exhibit of the choicest children's literature in both expensive and inexpensive editions is shown annually in connection with this room as suggestions for home purchase. It grows each year in attractiveness and patronage.

School Library

The School library is a collection of about 8,000 children's books, which are sent out to the schools to be divided into class-room libraries at the beginning of each school year.

The make-up of the School library is conditioned by the service which it is intended to render. Since it is never kept intact as a single library, but is divided into several hundred class-room libraries whenever it is in use, only the best available books on each subject are purchased for it, and those are largely duplicated.

It follows that, though the class-room libraries with their comparatively limited number of titles, may serve to arouse and stimulate the children's interests, they can be used to the best advantage only in connection with a more extensive library, where those interests can be further developed and satisfied. It is important that every teacher should understand and explain to her pupils this connection between the small libraries in the class-rooms and the larger collections of children's books at the Main public library and its branches.

The number of books sent to each school is determined by the number of pupils and the distance of the school from the public libraries. From these books the teachers select their own class-room libraries. Teachers are urged to make exchange among themselves throughout the year and to return to the Main library for exchange all books that are not being used.

A collection of about 1,000 books, plus the new books purchased during the year, is kept at the Main library in the Children's Reference room as a basis for exchange. Teachers may secure additional books from this collection at any time. Special notices will be sent to the schools whenever there is a large number of new books available.

Books from the class-room libraries may be used in the schools or issued by the teachers for home reading. Children are responsible to their teachers and through them to the library for the care and safe return of books.

Adult Reference Service

The Reference Study Hall at the north of the book room gives a quiet place for study and consultation of the strictly reference books, such as cyclopedias, dictionaries, year books, atlases, and handbooks.

The West reference room contains full files of about 200 bound periodicals. The most used of these are indexed in Poole's Index and the Reader's Guide, which may be consulted in the room. The periodicals are arranged alphabetically about the room, and a list showing the completeness of the Library's files is posted on the ends of the book cases.

In a sense, all the library is used for reference, because the shelves are all open to the public and good guides are furnished to the books. The balcony furnishes many especially quiet nooks for study and reading. If one reads the shelf labels and takes the initial trouble to learn what follows he will be "at home."

HOW TO USE THE LIBRARY

Two Tools

Modern library science has produced two guides to books in the library. The Dayton Library not only provides these guides in a very thorough fashion, but gives its patrons free access to practically all the shelves. A knowledge of at least the first principles of these guides or tools to the use of the Library is therefore essential to the teacher and student who would make the Library her own and impart also to her pupils the power to use it.

Arrangement of Books on the Shelves

The Library is classified by the Dewey Decimal system, which arranges the books first by subject, then by author, assigning to each subject a number which is placed on the back of the books, the books being then arranged numerically in order on the shelves from 000 to 900. The general classes with their numbers are as follows:

000 General works
100 Philosophy
200 Religion
300 Social sciences
400 Philology
500 Natural sciences
600 Useful arts
700 Fine arts
800 Literature
900 History
T Travel, description, and geography (shelved after 900)
B Individual biography (shelved after T, arranged alphabetically by subject's name)

These general classes are again divided and subdivided decimally to include many thousand subjects upon which books are written.

Some of the subjects and their shelf numbers most used by the teachers are as follows:

R016 Bibliographies
R030 Cyclopedias
R050 Periodicals
150 Psychology and child study
170 Ethics
220 Bible
292-293 Mythology
342 Government
350 Administration
370 Education
398 Folk-lore, legends, fairy tales
R423 English dictionaries
425 English grammar

980 History of South America
990 History of Oceanica, Polar regions
T01 General geography
T09 Explorations
T4 Europe—travel and description
T5-T9 (Travel and description of other countries, numbers meaning same as history numbers)
B1-B9 Collective biography (the numbers have same significance as in general classes, i. e., B5—collection of lives of the scientists)

Fiction is arranged as a class by itself, alphabetically by author, and has no call numbers.

Juvenile books have j preceding call number, school library books S, reference books R, jR, or sR.

The Card Catalog

This is an index on cards to all the books in the Library. It is a list of authors, titles, and subjects in one alphabet and is consulted like a dictionary or cyclopedia. When one has found notice here of the book wanted, the "call number" in the upper left-hand corner of the card directs to the exact shelf location of the book desired.

Below is a sample subject card:

Coal and Coal Mining.
In
j602 Bradish, Sarah Powers.
B8 Stories of country life. Amer. bk. co. c1901
p. 96-130.
il. (Eclectic school readings)
Simple elementary stories of agricultural industries and animal life; of lumbering, coal mining; and the distribution of iron and wheat and their manufacture into steel and flour.

It indicates that something on coal and coal mining may be found in Bradish's Stories of country life, pages 96 to 130, and that the book may be found in the Juvenile Library, shelf 602 (Dewey Decimal number for manuals on useful arts). B8 is the author number, i. e., a symbol used to denote Bradish.

The Card Catalogs in the Main Library are as follows: Catalogs No. 1 and 2, located at the left of the main entrance, list all books in the Library, except fiction and public documents. Catalog No. 1 refers to books in the "Old library," some 5,000 volumes not yet classified by the Decimal classification. Catalog No. 2 refers to all other classed books, except the document collection.

The fiction catalog at the Loan desk lists all fiction by author, title, and subject and annotates many.

The catalog in the Children's room lists all books in Children's and School libraries by author, title, and subject, and is the only complete index of those books.

The card catalog is truly an index to the books in the Library. By consulting it, one can find a book, of which one is in search, by almost any clue, i. e., author, title, series, or subject. Parts of books are indexed as well as entire books, such as essays, biographical and critical sketches, chapters on special topics, orations, etc. Whole books are also often entered under several different subjects. Thus the card catalog is an index catalog to all the books of the Library, whether on the shelves or in circulation, and its fulness of subject entry makes it much more exact and complete than the shelf arrangement can be. Cross references between related subjects or from synonymous terms to terms chosen for entry also aid in the search for the material in the catalog, i. e., Ornithology, see Birds. Psychology, see also Child study.

A knowledge of the use of the catalog is essential to all real student use of the Library.
